34th Annual ART & SCIENCE of Health Promotion Conference

You won't want to miss the 2024 Art & Science of Health Promotion Conference in Hilton Head, South Carolina. The theme of this year's conference is Health Equity. A portion of the conference program will be dedicated to delving into this vital topic and its implications for designing, implementing and evaluating programs and policies.

We hope you'll join us to gain practical, evidence-based insights from and be inspired by the top researchers and practitioners in our field. Our esteemed faculty will explore innovative approaches for centering health equity in all health promotion initiatives. This includes inspiring examples of interventions that rely on community-based participatory research approaches to advancing health equity, creative partnerships that have been formed to promote health equity, and measurement and evaluation models that recognize and address structural racism and other inequities. The agenda also includes numerous sessions that will highlight cutting-edge workplace strategies to optimize health and well-being, as well as new perspectives in health promotion.

And equally important, you'll have time to reconnect with longtime friends and colleagues, make new connections, enjoy the beautiful beach and try new activities!

Can't wait to see you there!

Sara S. Johnson, Ph.D.

Conference Chair, Art & Science of Health Promotion Conference | Co-President, ProChange

Conference Theme

The Essential Role of Health Promotion in Advancing Health Equity

Perhaps no other singular issue is as fundamental to our mission as health promotion professionals as the need to advance health equity. In fact, Healthy People 2030 defines health equity as “the attainment of the highest level of health for all people.” Many national foundations and organizations have clarified that the definition of health equity, however, is insufficient if it does not address the need for fair and just opportunity to attain that highest level of health. Unfortunately, persistent systematic barriers related to structural racism, socioeconomic status, gender identity, sexual orientation, differing abilities and other factors continue to perpetuate and exacerbate glaring inequities.

Health promotion professionals are uniquely suited to leverage and catalyze the increasing attention and energy being invested in promoting health equity.

Read the full theme at www.HealthPromotionConference.org.

Conference sessions will explore:

- Innovative approaches for centering health equity in all health promotion initiatives
- Inspiring examples of interventions that rely on community-based participatory research approaches to advancing health equity
- Creative partnerships that have been created to promote health equity
- Measurement and evaluation models that recognize and address structural racism and other inequities.
